

More updates

Written by Steve Hildinger

Friday, 09 December 2011 06:30 - Last Updated Tuesday, 20 December 2011 19:30

A number of items have been entered into the store. Today is picture day and we'll be getting pictures added in as well as more products that we have. The pictures will really make it look a lot better; right now it can get somewhat confusing. You still cannot actually order anything, we are awaiting a credit card processing method right now (just awaiting a reply), so just contact us in person if you are interested in purchasing one of our RepRaps, we will have 2 ready to be sold or shipped out in about a week. The store will allow you to go through it as if you were buying something. Until the store is open online, these orders will not be filled.

I've gone through and added fake stock numbers to the RepRap parts in the store for testing-http://gala-automation.com/index.php?option=com_virtuemart&page=shop.browse&category_id=1&Itemid=18

I don't want to put actual stock number in until the credit processing application has gone through since they will be testing things out. Once that is done, I will close the demo store for a few hours to fill in stock numbers, then re-open and you can purchase items online.